Our Heritage

Paul P. Harris
(1868-1947)

Born in Racine, Wisconsin and raised in Vermont by his grandparents, Paul was the Rotary movement founder.

In 1897 he settled in Chicago and established a law practice. However, he missed the close social relationships typical of small towns. Paul developed an idea for a club which would band together business and professional men in friendship and fellowship.

On February 23, 1905, the Rotary Club's first meeting took place in Room 711 in Chicago's Unity Building (now where Block 37 stands). Paul named the club "Rotary" because the members met, in rotation, at their various places of business.

The idea caught on, first in other U.S. cities and then in other countries. Today there are over 32,000 clubs in more than 200 countries with over 1.2 million members. In 100 years, one man's idea has become a worldwide force for service and international fellowship.

Chesley R. Perry
(1872-1960)

Ches joined the Rotary Club of Chicago in 1908 at 36 years of age and continued to be an active member of our club throughout his lifetime. In 1909 Paul Harris asked Ches to develop a nationwide plan for an association of Rotary Clubs. When the National Association of Rotary Clubs (the forerunner of Rotary International) was founded a year later, Ches began a 31-year career as its General Secretary.

When he retired from Rotary International in 1941 Ches Perry had overseen the incredible expansion of Rotary into a truly effective worldwide organization.

Paul Harris said of Ches, "If I can in truth be called the architect, Ches can with equal truth be called the builder of Rotary International."
